How you can break up the

VICIOUS CYCLE of NERVOUS TENSION HEADACHES

Better than aspirin
even with buffering added

How Tension Headaches Start

90% of all headaches are caused by tension that comes from a source you'd never suspect—the muscles of back of neck and scalp. This tension causes pressure on nerves and tiny blood vessels and results in pain. In turn, the pain builds up more tension, more pressure and makes your headache worse. That's why you should try the special medication in Anacin (not found in aspirin or even in aspirin with buffering) to give fast and more complete pain relief and break up the vicious tension headache cycle.

ANACIN® • relaxes tension

• releases pressure

• relieves pain fast

Tension headaches need the special medication in Anacin for more complete pain-relief. So why limit yourself to aspirin or buffered aspirin which contain only one pain reliever when you can benefit by the extra medication in Anacin? Anacin contains not just one but a combination of medically proven ingredients which 3 out of 4 doctors recommend for headache pain. And here's why Anacin gives a 'better total effect' in relieving pain of tension headache, neuritis and neuralgia...

The special medication in Anacin — which you do not get in aspirin or buffered aspirin — relaxes the tension, releases the pressure and promptly relieves your headache. Anacin stops the vicious pain cycle fast. Anacin Tablets are safer, too. They do not upset your stomach. Buy Anacin today.

Funny how summer television affects people. Over here the problem of networks and sponsors—who usually treat June, July and August as television's bargain basement—is to get viewers to stay home and keep on watching their sets.

In England the problem seems to be to drag folks away from their sets during the summer months and force them to inhale a bit of fresh air. At least that's what the London County Council had in mind when it took under consideration a project to install television sets throughout the parks of London.

Americans who have strolled through Hyde Park of a midsummer night would be distressed to think of television sets parked on trees and bushes, diverting attention from such standard entertainment as listening to the soap-box orators, watching the duck-feeders at the Serpentine, and observing the romantic couples.

It would be a shame to change all that just because some Britons prefer stuffy rooms and television.

We've a better idea to solve the fresh-air problem in London. If the County Council is serious about forcing people out of their homes and into the parks, it might accomplish the objective much more easily by importing American summer programs—reruns of film series, cheap quizzes, silly panel shows. That'll drive them away from their sets! It has worked in America for years—no reason why it shouldn't work in England.

Why they all appear for little Georgie...

Jessel with actress Agnes Moorehead on his show.

Russell, Dean Martin, Jack Paar, Edgar Bergen, the Mills Brothers and Chico Marx. If they perform, they are paid at scale: $82.50. And they do it all for little Georgie Jessel.

Why they do it all for little Georgie Jessel is readily understood by anyone who has spent an hour with the man. His wit is warm rather than sharp, he converses easily and he's that rare show-business personality who not only listens to the other fellow but actually encourages him to say more.

In a Hollywood restaurant one recent noon, Jessel expounded quietly on the subject of Jessel. "I was born in the Bronx," he said. "I had exactly eight months of schooling when I was seven. Whatever facility I may have with the English language I credit entirely to reading and retaining. I am not an actor. I have seldom played any part I didn't write myself."

His major project now is public speaking. Starting in February of 1958, he covered 21 cities in 23 days. He averages 66 speaking dates a year on his Bonds for Israel tours alone. He estimates he has raised "more than $60,000,000" for charities.

Jessel's career started in 1909. He was with the Imperial Singing Trio and the late Gus Edwards' vaudeville acts. He still sings and even has an album out, although his voice could be compared with that of George Burns.

"Mine is better," he says, with a touch of wounded feelings in his voice.

George Jessel, now 60 and still remembered by a handful of survivors as the batboy for the then New York Giants around 1909, is holding forth on a weekly, 90-minute local show in Los Angeles these days.

To those who consider this activity a comedown for the "toastmaster general" and former network "goodwill ambassador" and star, Jessel has an icy stare and a financially sound reply. Starting in July, the taped shows will be edited to half an hour and put into syndication around the country.

"Besides," Jessel says, "I enjoy it. Most of my old friends are here, in and around Hollywood. A lot of them come on the show."

KCOP, the station on which Jessel holds forth, can boast an enviable roster of big-name stars, all of them barely paid guests on Jessel's informal show. They include Bing Crosby, Jack Benny, George Burns, Eddie Cantor, Milton Berle, Jimmy Durante, Jane

THE WESTERNS ARE DIFFERENT

Western fans who have experienced that uneasy 'I've been here before' feeling while watching the hero mosey along a familiar-looking street may take heart. To free viewers of worrisome psychiatric overtones, TV GUIDE publishes these photographs showing how Revue Productions adapts one Western street at Republic Studios for all-purpose use on four shows. About all that ever get changed are the signs. In a single week, the same building can be a saloon, a dance hall, a general store and a post office.

on Restless Gun set. Finally, Dale Robertson sits his trusty steed while filming an episode for Tales of Wells Fargo. So don't fear that you're losing your grip if you think you've been there before. You have. So have these stars—practically every week, in fact.

BUT THE STREET'S THE SAME

Here's what schools offer students

A high school student wanting to study television can take his choice of about 300 colleges and universities around the country. In some 30 percent of these, he can major in TV.

But how valuable is such college training? Majoring in TV has some advantages, according to Robert F. Lewine, NBC's vice president in charge of programs. "It would be comparable to majoring in economics or geology or hen-raising, if any of these things are pertinent to what the student wishes to do in the future."

He conceded that there is considerable resistance among the "old guard" at the networks against hiring young people straight out of college. NBC, in fact, has never hired anybody simply because he majored in TV.

One reason for this thinking is advanced by Prof. Garnet R. Garrison, director of broadcasting at the University of Michigan: Many network and advertising-agency executives, he says, are graduates of Ivy League schools, few of which offered extensive training in television.

(One Ivy League school, the University of Pennsylvania, has taken a long stride forward with the establishment of The Annenberg School of Communications, which will include television courses in its graduate curriculum. First classes begin next September. It will be the Nation's first full-time graduate school devoted to the entire communications field, including printed and broadcast media.)

"In the rest of the country," Professor Garrison said, "many stations do turn to the schools in their areas for staff members. A number of station people call upon us at Michigan."

What should a student interested in television consider in selecting a college? The following suggestions were offered by Professor Garrison:

1. Is the school strong in general liberal arts? Television requires a broad cultural background. Lectures, concerts, plays, art exhibitions should stimulate self-growth.

2. There should not be too narrow a concentration on the study of broadcast techniques. The student should take courses in allied fields—psychology, literature, the arts, sociology, journalism, music, political science, marketing, advertising and languages.

3. Are there opportunities to "learn by doing" while attending college? If the school is in an area with commercial or educational TV stations, the student might obtain part-time employment at these stations.

4. How good is the faculty? Have the instructors had actual meaningful experience in television?

5. Does the school provide sufficient access to facilities comparable to those at television stations?

In schools that offer TV training, students have a wide choice of TV subjects. Those not interested in majoring in television can select single courses in the TV departments. Many schools provide a TV workshop in which students use actual equipment.

In addition, there are courses in TV writing, acting, production, program planning, studio operation, station management, advertising, research, TV marketing, law and engineering. On the technical side, there are courses in electronics, transmitter operation, ultra-high-frequency transmission and facsimile transmission.

Northwestern University, in conjunction with Chicago's WNBQ, offers a six-week symposium on color TV each summer. New York University has a 15-week, noncredit workshop in which the students stage a "typical day in TV" as their final session. The University of Michigan produces and kinescopes an average of four programs each week, then distributes these to about 20 stations, both commercial and educational.

As an example of a day in the life of a senior TV student, here's what he might go through at the University of Denver, which offers a bachelor's degree in television.

At 9 A.M. he reports for his first class, stage lighting. At 10:40, he has a course in creative writing and at 11:40 in TV production. After lunch, he reports to KRMA-TV, a Denver educational station, where he takes over the director's chair or pushes a microphone boom or a camera. At 3, he reports to KLZ-TV, where he does camera work on commercials or live programs until 10 or 11 P.M. On Sunday, he might work on the university's live show, Focus, on KRMA-TV.

The need for "people who can program television constructively and sell it constructively" was pointed up by Joseph Weed, president of Weed Radio and TV Corporations. At Iowa State University, he declared:

"I know that today there is a great hue and cry to train qualified technical or engineering personnel to meet the needs of the electronics age. I would like to submit, however, that there is equal if not surpassing need to train people to employ our great means of communication in order that we may be able not only to conquer unknown worlds . . . but in order that we may also be able to understand each other and to live together."

it down," the successful man said to the girl. "I want to teach you how to sell short."

They were father and daughter, the man being W. J. Lake, now a retired importer-exporter, and the girl being Ann Sothern—who was Harriette Lake before she became Ann Sothern. That was shortly before she became Maisie in MGM's series of movies.

Ann is now 47 but still, to all intents and purposes, Maisie. She is also, thanks to her father, a competent businesswoman who is president of five corporations.

"I am the oldest of three girls and my father always wanted a son," Ann noted one afternoon in her new Bel Air home. "I'm devoted to him. He's taught me everything I know about business. Couple of years ago he got me interested in cattle. Now I have 200 head of Aberdeen Angus and soon there'll be almost 400."

Their residence is Ann's A Bar S Cattle Co., Wendell, Idaho, with the unlikely address of 360 N. Camden Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. Also headquartered at the Camden Drive address are the A Bar S Music Corp., Vincent Productions, Inc. and Ann Sothern's Sewing Center (its "branch" and only shop is at Sun Valley, Idaho). Then there's Anso Productions, Inc., with offices in Hollywood.

For a girl who just sort of "stumbles into" businesses, Ann does a pretty fair job of keeping them going. She got the idea for the sewing center two years ago when she was vaca- continued tioning in Sun Valley, and the urge for knitting came upon her. "I went down to the little business center to look for a yarn shop and couldn't find one. I can now. Mine."

Ann also does all the buying for the sewing center, which today includes both dress and gift departments. She has become something of an expert on materials and the value of gift items.

"I go to the gift shows with all the other buyers and I can just see them thinking, 'There's that TV star. What's she doing here?' And then I start selecting and discarding and using their jargon, and their mouths fall open."

The A Bar S Music Corp., which came into being in 1956, handles things like "Katy," her current show's theme song, on which she and her sister Bonnie Lake collaborated. She now has "a good catalog of songs, including three we've used in the show," and is looking around for a professional music-man to run the company. "It's a cutthroat business," she says, "and I'd just as soon let somebody else run it."

Vincent Productions was formed originally to handle Private Secretary affairs and to take two talented youngsters under wing. Ann has since given up on the two youngsters. "They had the talent," she shrugs, "but they wouldn't work. Youngsters today think the magic is going to hit them overnight and they just have to be there." Denying the rumor that she had refused $500,000 for her interest in the Private Secretary reruns, Ann said, "I have never been interested in selling my interest in Private Secretary. And people do not make you offers unless they know you are interested."

CBS's current Ann Sothern Show, filmed in partnership with Desilu, is handled by Anso Productions and is the one in which Ann takes the most active interest. "I got talked into doing this series," she admits, "but as long as I was going to do it, I wanted to do it right. They call me the MGM girl over there. 'The things that girl wants!' they say. But you have to do it. You have to do things yourself."

With all her activity, Ann professes to lead a lonely life. "I'm a business-girl in spite of myself," she says wistfully. "I'd much rather run a home than businesses. MCA [the Music Corporation of America talent agency; Ann currently is represented by the William Morris agency] wanted to handle me last year. They said, 'Ann, you're a bread-and-butter girl. Always working, always making money.'

"Well, that's what I am. I leave the house early in the morning and I bring home the bacon late at night and the servants think I'm crazy to work so hard. And I need the servants because I can't run a house while I'm at a studio all day earning the money to pay somebody to run the house while I'm earning the money."

"The house" is a Bel Air mansion Ann bought last October to accommodate her daughter Tish. "When a 14-year-old girl starts bringing her friends home, that's the time you move out of the apartment and get a house. It's the first real home we've had in years." (Tish's father, actor Robert Sterling, and Ann were divorced in 1948 after five years of marriage. Ann previously had been married to bandleader Roger Pryor.)

Bothered by a weight problem which has plagued her ever since a bout with hepatitis 10 years ago, Ann must guard against fatigue, can exercise very little ("I used to play tennis and am now trying to get back into it") and enjoys little social life.

"Frankly," she says, "I would much rather be married and let someone else worry about making a living. I would love to be married to a diplomat, say, and give elegant dinners."

"I would like to live elegantly. Instead, I have to run five businesses."

The Hallmark Hall of Fame, for the first time in its distinguished history, will repeat a show next Monday, March 23. The play is Marc Connelly's adaptation of his stage play "The Green Pastures."

Mildred Freed Alberg, Hallmark's executive producer, explained the reason for the repeat. "The number of phone calls, wires and letters after the first show was overwhelming. Also, a lot of people didn't see the show. You may recall that the first time we did it (Oct. 17, 1957) we were in the same time period as the Mike Todd party from Madison Square Garden. Mike outdrew us almost two to one. We thought it especially appropriate to offer this drama again during the Easter season."

Most of the show's all-Negro cast assembled for the first TV production will be in the repeat showing. William Warfield again will play

De Lawd, and Eddie (Rochester) Anderson will be back as Noah.

Connelly's play opened in New York Feb. 26, 1930, winning the Pulitzer Prize that year. It ran for 640 performances before going on the road for five years, when it was reportedly seen in 112 cities.

Abroad, the play ran into difficulty. It was banned from England by virtue of an old law forbidding portrayal of God by an actor. In Stockholm the actors were pelted with garbage for what an irate Swedish press called "religious lampoonery."

The play has been revived on Broadway twice and was made into a movie in 1936. Eddie Anderson played Noah in the film too.

This second time on TV will be a duplicate of the first as far as cast size (80), expensive sets and production staff are concerned. Miss Alberg expects one change: a tremendously increased audience.

TELEVISION DIARY

John the Giant Killer: John (Restless Gun) Payne blazed away at an opponent far more formidable than any he had ever met on the screen. He and Music Corporation of America, the giant talent agency which controls a large percentage of all filmed TV, were fighting over who rules Restless Gun (in which MCA, through its subsidiary, Revue, has a quarter interest). Irrked by "constant interference," Payne ordered MCA to "take your hands off my show," and went through with his decision—hotly disrupted by MCA to give Restless Gun producer David Dortort his release to produce an NBC show, Bonanza—in which MCA has no direct interest.

It Never Rains But: The Three Stooges, a success once more (see story on page 20), made TV news last week. Screen Gems announced the availability of 40 more shorts made by the slapstick comedians to add to the 78 already rife on TV. Meantime the studio was swamped with offers from toy manufacturers, comic-book publishers and record companies, all wishing to cut themselves in.

Best of the Big Ones: Playhouse 90 achieved a major breakthrough in TV drama with Part I of its massive two-part (three-hour) version of Ernest Hemingway's For Whom the Bell Tolls. Despite rather stagey—and at times woefully inadequate—sets, the show compared favorably with the 1943 movie. A.E. Hotchner, who did the adaptation of the novel for TV, flew out to Hemingway's private lodge in Ketchum, Ida., to get papa's reaction to the program face to face. The betting at CBS was that papa would be pleased.

LATE... and EXCLUSIVE

■ You'll be happy to know (see As We See It, page 3) that the London County Council has decided NOT to fill London parks with television sets this summer . . . VIC DAMONE wants to star in a Western series. That would make it TV's first adult singing Western.

■ NBC sports chief TOM S. GALLERY proved a shrewd bidder in grabbing off the NCAA football games again for next fall. The NCAA invites the networks to submit closed bids. Last year GALLERY's $1,800,000 was the only bid entered. This year CBS also submitted one, which, alphabetically, was opened first. It was for $2,000,000. Came a hush as the NCAA execs opened GALLERY's bid, which had to top CBS's. It was for $2,200,000, automatically giving NBC the rights for the fifth consecutive year.

■ All the publicity about PERRY COMO's new $25,000,000 Kraft deal is expected to backfire on PERRY. As one talent agent pointed out, "They announced the money is to include guest fees. Well, if COMO has that much to spend, I want more for my people than he's paid them until now" . . . CBS hoping to elevate daytime TV standards with its planned series of hour-long daytime specials titled Woman! First one, scheduled for May, carries a $60,000 price-tag and the network hopes to land JANE WYMAN as hostess.

■ That two-hour Meet Me in St. Louis special April 26, originally scheduled as a live production, will be pre-taped. Seems MGM discovered it owns rights only for reproduction, not for an original show—and taping makes it a reproduction. The show will cost about $750,000 for time, talent and production, just $75,000 less than last fall's Wonderful Town, still TV's most expensive one-shot.

LOCAL... and TIMELY

■ In a survey compiled by Ch. 5, there were 695,000 TV sets in the Ft. Worth-Dallas area as of Mar. 1, 1959. A constant check on set increases has been effected by Ch. 5 since the station went on the air as the pioneer TV outlet in the Southwest, Sept. 29, 1948.

■ Today with DAVE GARROWAY (7 A.M., Chs. 5, 6, weekdays), will originate from Dallas during the opening of the city's newest hotel early in April.

A TV CLOSE-UP GUIDE 4:00 5 6 KALEIDOSCOPE — Documentary

Wire-tapping equipment and other eavesdropping devices have modernized police-detection techniques. But their use by law-enforcement agencies, other investigators and criminals has raised serious moral and legal questions.

Chet Huntley narrates a one-hour report on eavesdropping, showing its techniques, citing cases in which it has been used, analyzing its effectiveness and its evils and attempting to answer this question: is our classic concept of privacy being undermined by these activities?

Aspects of the question are dealt with, on film, by Samuel Dash, former Philadelphia district attorney and author of "The Eavesdroppers"; William Keating, former assistant D.A. of New York County; Anthony Savarese, New York State assemblyman and chairman of a committee looking into the problem; Howard Cerny, counsel to that committee; Robert La Borde, private detective; William Mellin, retired Treasury agent; Dr. Leo Barenek, acoustics consultant; and Jimmy Carroll, who sells eavesdropping equipment.

STATE OF TELEVISION

Third of a series

AND YOUR CHILD

When television became part of the home, parents could no longer control the impact of the outside world upon their children once the children could walk across the room and turn a knob.

When the outside world came into the home only through reading, parents could protect their children until they learned to read, and even later, to some extent, by selecting what reading matter was bought and brought into the home or borrowed from the public library. When radio arrived, the outside world entered earlier, when children were about four. And American children now meet the pressures of a world teeming with conflict and contrast, with the vividness of television, by the age of two.

Parental concern over the effect of television violence on their children is therefore sharpened by the age of their children's exposure and by their relative helplessness to choose what their children see.

In the past, juvenile delinquency and crime have been blamed on dime novels, movie serials, horror comics and radio serials. The last few years have seen a spate of accusations against television violence as a "cause" of the juvenile delinquency that ravages our children in cities—cities with and without any of these mass media "causes"—in every part of the world. TV has also come in for many of the accusations once hurled against radio, which now, amusingly enough, seems by contrast to have been converted into a "good influence" (which makes one wonder whether the continued

BY MARGARET MEAD

A world-famed anthropologist's analysis of both the good and the bad influences

Dr. Margaret Mead is the author of more than a dozen books on contemporary cultures. She is associate curator of ethnology at the American Museum of Natural History and adjunct professor of anthropology at Columbia University.

word "good" does not, in this sense, simply mean "weaker"). Television, with the strongest immediate appeal to the child and adolescent viewer, becomes—because more potent—more likely to be blamed for anything that is going wrong in children's and adolescents' adjustment to contemporary society.

The whole argument also is obscured by the tendency to treat all violence as identical—news releases of actual crimes, the spot telecasts of mob scenes, fictional detective stories, Westerns, "space operas" and the enactment by puppets of traditional fairy tales, where giants and witches abound. All of this is "violence" in the eyes of many critics, who lump together every occasion on the screen in which anyone—real or unreal, past, present or to come—hits, maims, kills, eats, disembowels or regurgitates some other creature. The opponents of those who would sweep violence from the screen naturally respond that the children enjoy conflict and scream with delight when pies fly through the air and hit someone plop in the face, and that taking violence out of television, or out of children's programs, would reduce them to a dull milk-and-water fare not worth looking at. "But," those who oppose violence respond, "can we afford to turn our children into monsters of crime by exposing them to violence which calls aloud for emulation of the criminal exploits in the telecast?"

In a way, both sides are right, but they are not talking about the same thing. Children—and adults—do enjoy violence and the suspense, horror and release that go with tales that include violence. Children in particular enjoy seeing safely enacted in an unreal world dreadful deeds which they daydream about but would never dare imitate. Parents do seem like giants to children, and it's delightful to see them bested by giant-killers, aged nine or 10. Policemen are used to terrorize small children into good behavior. How delightful to watch one fall flat on his face! It is tiresome to have good table manners, and a glorious relief to see grown men throwing pies in each other's faces. The dark is a fearsome thing, and night terrors, lived through in the soft glow of a room lit by the light from the screen, become manageable and tame. Children even feel better, more like good children, their anger and hate drained safely out of them, after watching stories in which the weak encounter, battle and defeat the strong.

All this is true, and those who would denature fairy tales; water down Red Riding Hood; and take the chase, the shooting and the victory out of Westerns are actually constructing a world with escape without catharsis, without safe fantasy for childish aggression.

But all this holds only when the story on the screen is palpably fiction, fantasy and unreal. Children who are furiously angry with their parents know that they cannot do without them, even for a night. They can revel in the exploits of the good, lonely Hero fighting against the Bad Man and go to bed clear-eyed and innocent. But one scene in which someone who might really be themselves, now or in the future, actually kills real human beings who might be their parents or their teachers or their older brothers and sisters is quite a different matter.

This is too frightening to treat as a welcome fantasy-escape from the little hates of everyday. And for the occasional lonely child, consumed with hatred of some powerful adult, television shows which simulate reality so closely that the fiction is lost, or which report on real crime, become poison from which there is no escape. The violence on the screen is no longer an escape, but a prescription for murder, festering in the mind of the child trapped alone with its hatred, while the screen unfolds the details of crime. The practice of networks in reporting crime or in depicting fiction as if it were real life, with no guidelines to say to the watcher, "This is fiction, this isn't and couldn't really be you," is terribly dangerous.

As long as such programs remain on television, parents themselves have one redress against fiction clothed in life's reality. If they watch fiction with their children, they can interject a running commentary, in which the words "story," "just a story," "not real" are introduced, and so they can provide what the television program should itself provide: a protection for the child. But they cannot do this with a telecast of real crimes, if child murderers or murdered children are shown on the screen.

The parent cannot say, "This is not real"; and the child begins to ask, "Is this what children like me do when they are angry?"; or "Is this what my father or mother might do to me?" For the lonely child who hates because he or she is lonely, there are likely to be no parents to comment and give protection against fiction, and the screen becomes an incentive and program for possible crime. There it is not so much a question of how many actual crimes are committed as the damage done to a human being set to dreaming by an instrument which claims to serve society.

Television is not, of course, the only offender in the gloating, detailed report of crime. Radio and the tabloids also batten on the morbid curiosity born of incipient murderous impulses in the minds of frustrated, hating people. But television's responsibility is unique because here it is small children whose minds are exposed to the horror and violence of real crime. If television can take responsibility for the way in which it provides a window on the world for little children, then it can continue to provide the excitement of fairy stories and Westerns, without which life would be tame indeed (and for which the demand is insatiable), and voluntarily refuse to tempt children's minds over the brink of crime.

MASTERS OF MAYHEM

with a yock, yock, yock

and a boing, boing, boing,

The Three Stooges

run rampant again

f Little Crockery, who has always been a quiet child, suddenly forks his fingers into Mother's eyes, it's probably too late to do anything about it. Too bad the storm warnings never went up!

The fact is that The Three Stooges, after several years in obscurity, are with us again. This is rather rough on mothers, but the kids are happy.

The Stooges—in the flesh at left—are Moe, the fellow with the greasy bangs; Larry, the one with hair like the inside of a sofa; and Joe, the fat one with hair similar to what you'd find on a dirty tennis ball. The Stooges for years were in almost total eclipse, but now they're on TV through syndication—by a firm named Screen Gems—of 78 of their old movie shorts, and are planning their own series.

These films are being shown on more than 85 stations. In Chicago their rating jumped 16 points in three months. In Philadelphia last month they had a 27.8 American Research Bureau rating, in Detroit a 14.8. Latest New York rating is 17.9.

In addition, they're making personal appearances all over the land and have turned up on The Steve Allen Show and Masquerade Party.

Moe Howard, who does most of the talking for the other two Stooges (Joe De Rita has succeeded Curly Howard, the fat Stooge most often seen in the television films, who died in 1952), was talking as usual while having his bangs clipped in a Broadway barber shop.

"Speedy," he said to the barber, "clip! clip! clip! Not too short. That hair is my living."

"I know! I know!" said the barber enthusiastically. "When you go outta here, you look just like when you come in!"

"Don't play up that business about mothers," Moe told a reporter menacingly. "The kids used to hiss me in the street. Now they behave fine. They have very good manners. The other day when we finished our act a little girl came up and kissed me. That wouldn't have happened in the old days."

From an adjacent barber chair, Larry Fine spoke up. His barber stepped back and surveyed Larry's wild hair apprehensively.

"The kids paint our faces on eggs and electric light bulbs now," said Larry. "They used to throw those things at us."

"Kids is kids," said Moe firmly, withering Larry with a beady stare. "We've went through two generations already and I'll tell you now. Kids is still kids."

In all their movies Moe played the mean Stooge, the fellow who got the other two in trouble. Curly played a likable simpleton who got into everyone's hair. And Larry says he has the hair "everyone got into."

The Three Stooges were born, artistically speaking, 36 years ago. In 1923, Moe and one of his brothers, Shemp, had a dramatic act, and a boyhood friend, the late Ted Healy, continued was a young acrobat. One night at a theater in Brooklyn, Ted's assistant acrobat walked out and Moe offered to fill in. He gummed up the act completely but Healy was impressed. In a week Healy, Moe and Shemp were touring the provinces in a comedy acrobatic act called "Ted Healy and His Gang."

In Chicago, Healy added Larry Fine, a wild-haired little fiddle player, to the act, which immediately became "Ted Healy and His Three Southern Gentlemen." (Later, Shemp left the act and was succeeded by Curly.) For nearly 10 years Healy and company toured the big towns and the tank towns, absorbing both kudos and clouts as they traveled. In 1930 they made a movie, "Soup to Nuts," which threatened to turn Healy, at least, into a star.

Healy was not unaware of this, and soon began to eye the Stooges doubtfully.

"Ted loved us," said Moe. "He was always great to us. But I thought it was time we moved on. So I spoke up. 'Ted,' I said, 'you've been grand to us all these years. If you have a chance to make yourself a big star without us, go ahead. We'll make out all right.'"

An engaging smile spread over Healy's features as he accepted Moe's suggestion. Moe, Larry and Shemp were now unemployed.

Moe leaned back in his barber chair and relished the recollection of the moving moment.

"I walked out the front door of Ted's office and ran into a talent scout from Columbia Pictures. He signed Larry, Shemp and me immediately as 'The Three Stooges.'"

"And I walked out the back door and ran into a talent scout from Universal-International," Larry broke in. "And he signed us up immediately too."

"They're still suing, I think," said Moe with a sigh.

The Stooges made 200 shorts for Columbia, all of which in time will be seen on TV. When Curly died in 1952 he was succeeded eventually by Joe, whom Moe discovered standing in front of a Hollywood restaurant and signed forthwith—because he looked like Curly.

Moe describes Stoogian comedy as "deflation comedy." A deflation gag, he says, is "when we hit an elegant lady in the squash with a pie. It deflates her."

"We're called 'sight' comics," said Moe between the snips of his barber's shears. "But we're also 'sound' comics. When I belted Curly with a mallet, you heard a clear, bell-like sound. And when Larry runs a comb through his hair, you hear a crackling sound, like someone had exposed a live wire."

Although Moe and Larry have been slapping each other around for decades, they wear little scar tissue. Once both fell downstairs during a mock fight and wound up in adjoining hospital beds, still frozen in the attitudes of combat. Again, Larry sustained a brain concussion when a breakaway chair didn't break. And once Moe, in a phony football huddle, clouted Larry so robustly in the jaw that Larry's eyes crossed.

"We shot a close-up of Larry right then," said Moe as he arose from the barber chair. "Best shot in the whole film."

After Larry's tresses were combed, the Stooges departed. That barber shop—and those barbers—may never be the same.

EGGS-ACTLY RIGHT FOR EASTER

When the girls drop in, surprise them with these easily prepared menus

Now is the time, to paraphrase the saying, to put all your eggs in more than one basket. This is what TV GUIDE has done in its Easter-season food presentation (see picture on previous pages).

Many families will round out Easter Sunday's activities next week by watching some of the special television shows, including Mary Martin's two performances on NBC.

These suggestions go well with the holiday TV fare and are equally good for those spring luncheons when the girls drop over for an afternoon of television or bridge. Included are a variety of deviled eggs, gelatin eggs, chicken salad in fluted tartlets; and, for tradition's sake, we add ham rolls stuffed with egg salad.

Stuffed Eggs and Variations

- 6 hard-cooked eggs
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- ¼ tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. pepper
- 1 tsp. prepared mustard
- 1 tbsp. pickle relish

Split eggs, carefully remove yolks. Mash yolks, add remaining ingredients. Fill whites with mixture. Garnish as desired. 12 servings.

Variations:

- Add ½ tsp. chili powder, 2 tbsp. chopped ripe olives to basic mixture.
- Add ¼ tsp. curry powder to basic mixture. Garnish with toasted, slivered almonds.
- Add 1 tbsp. deviled ham to basic mixture.

Gelatin Eggs

Make a small hole at each end of the egg shell, break the yolk and shake the egg out. (Use broken eggs for scrambling.) Rinse shell with cold water and drain. When dry, cover one hole with tape and fill egg shell with one of the following gelatin mixtures. Refrigerate, upright, until firm.

Remove shell, decorate with softened cream cheese in a pastry tube. Serve in a basket on a bed of green-tinted coconut.

Gelatin Flavors:

- Dissolve 1 pkg. strawberry-flavored gelatin in ¾ cup hot water. Add 1 cup pineapple juice. Fills 7 eggs.
- Dissolve 1 pkg. lemon-flavored gelatin in ¾ cup hot water. Add 1 cup orange juice. Fills 7 eggs.
- Dissolve 1 pkg. lime-flavored gelatin in ¾ cup hot water. Add 1 cup ginger ale. Fills 7 eggs.

Ham and Egg Rolls

- 12 thin slices boiled ham
- 6 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- ½ tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. pepper
- 3 tbsp. chopped green onions
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- 2 tbsp. catsup
- ½ tsp. dry mustard

Combine eggs, seasonings, onions, mayonnaise, catsup and mustard. Divide egg salad among slices of ham. Roll and fasten with toothpicks. Refrigerate. Slice in one-inch pieces. Makes 36 rolls.

Chicken-Salad Tartlets

Egg Pastry:

- ½ cup shortening
- 1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ¾ tsp. salt
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 1 tbsp. lemon juice

Cut shortening into flour and salt which have been sifted together. Whip egg and lemon juice together, add to flour mixture. Add enough water to make a soft dough. Roll out on floured board, cut in 3-inch circles and fit into 2-inch tart or muffin pans. Prick with a fork. Bake at 450°F. for 10 to 12 minutes or until golden brown.

Chicken Salad:

- 1½ cups diced chicken, cooked or canned
- 1 cup diced celery
- 1 tbsp. chopped parsley
- 1 tbsp. grated onion
- ½ tsp. salt
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- ¼ cup chopped, toasted almonds

Combine all ingredients and chill. Line cooled tart shells with a small piece of lettuce and heap with salad mixture. Makes 24 tarts.—Evelyn Bigsby

A scene from Circle Theater's 'Miracle at Springhill Mine.'

Occasionally, the show will fictionalize a composite of actual case histories, always with a message in mind. A recent example was "House of Cards," a dissertation on a disease known as compulsive gambling, that pointed out not only the evils thereof but how one might go about curing it.

Typical of the Circle Theater mold was "Miracle at Springhill Mine," which told the story of the two-week rescue operation following the October 1958 Nova Scotia mine disaster. It was a gripping bit of theatrics, made all the more so by the viewer's knowledge that what he was watching actually did happen. As is generally the case, the story was told from a reporter's point of view, and the reporter himself—in this instance a disc jockey who happened to be near the scene—had a few words to say at the close.

Circle Theater may not be as "distinguished" as some of its latter-day contemporaries, possibly because its stories are told by life itself rather than by literary-minded writers with carefully built reputations. Nevertheless, it is a biweekly haven for those seeking drama that is both interesting and exciting, and there is not much of that left on TV these days—D. J.

REVIEW

As one of the pitifully few survivors of the put-it-on-film blight that has decimated the ranks of the long, live dramas, Armstrong Circle Theater, almost by default, is close to the top of the heap. The fact that there are only two other regularly scheduled survivors, however, doesn't detract one iota from the show's own intrinsic worth.

Circle Theater has, in fact, the lone "gimmick" of any hour-long dramatic show, dead or alive. Its forte is dramatizing actual news events, sometimes even interspersing the live portions of a drama with newsreel clips of the event (a not overly successful practice, and one that could be dispensed with) and then winding up by presenting the real-life central character.

Not to be outdone by Broadway, which has been casting Oriental actors like mad this season, television has acquired its own beautiful flower of the East. She is billed as Lisa Lu but her true Chinese name is Lu Yen-Hsiang, which means "The Fragrance of Peking."

Born in Peking 27 years ago and raised in Shanghai, Miss Lu learned to speak English so flawlessly that when she came to America permanently in 1956 it was as a teacher of Chinese to GIs in an Army language school at Monterey, Cal. Lisa taught six months before she, her husband (an artist in traditional Chinese style) and three children moved on to Los Angeles, where The Fragrance of Peking studied at the Pasadena Playhouse, and hence matriculated into television.

Today she's seen on Yancy Derringer as the glamorous proprietress of a saloon. This is in addition to some 17 appearances on everything from Telephone Time (her first show) to "The Nightingale," on Shirley Temple's Storybook.

Lisa has been captivated by the theater ever since, as a child, she went to her first Chinese opera, and later saw her first American movie. But acting has been frowned upon for high-born Chinese girls (her family were scholars). Lisa wrung a promise from her parents not to interfere with her acting if she completed her education in financial administration.

And when she married in 1949, her husband promised that she would be free to pursue her career. Finally, at the University of Hawaii, she began to study drama and to appear in little-theater plays.

Despite breaking with some Oriental customs, Lisa has always preserved her Oriental identity. Even now she wears the traditional clothes of her country—tailored in Hong Kong.

Lisa's ultimate goal is something fairly serious in acting. Television she likes because "it is a challenge. You have to be a very good actress to work so fast." But most of all she would like to make "a movie which would introduce the real Chinese culture and philosophy to the West," another which would do the same for Western culture in the East.

Meanwhile, her years spent in educating herself for her career have paid off. She is even making a movie—"One-Eyed Jacks," with Marlon Brando, whom she describes as "hao-chi-la!"—"perfectly marvelous!"
